

I would like voice my comments to the FCC to reconsider using low power transmitters for listener supported radio networks such as KLOVE FM out of California. This network supports a market that local radio programming doesn't even come close to in quality of professionalism. Thank You.